Paige Wilson
Founder and CEO
Naborforce

Paige is a native of Richmond, Va. and spent the bulk of her career in the large corporate arena, holding senior positions in a number of notable Richmond companies, including Bank of America, Dominion Energy and Heilig-Meyers, where she was Treasurer and CFO. She later moved into investment banking, most recently as a Managing Director with Truist.

After struggling with the demands of caring for her aging mother, she made a bold move, left her large corporate career and became an entrepreneur. Naborforce is a high-growth startup and has received national recognition for its disruptive solution that utilizes technology to harness the strength of community, addressing one of this country's most pressing social issues as the number of older adults in the U.S. triples over the next few decades.

Paige is a graduate of the University of Virginia, has one daughter. She was recently appointed by Governor Youngkin to serve on the Commonwealth Council on Aging.
